Equalization Adopted by Board Of Supervisors

Committee Reaches Agreement With Deputy State Tax Commissioner Regarding Percentages Which Assessed Value of Real Property Bears to Full Value.

After a session with Deputy State Commissioner Spratt of the State Tax Department Tuesday afternoon at the supervisors' room in the court house, the equalization committee came to an agreement as to what percentages to establish and made a report at the session of the board of supervisors in the evening.

The report was read and adopted.

Gentlemen: Your committee on equalization respectfully reports that they have examined the tax rolls of the several towns of the county and of the city of Kingston, and such other evidence as was presented to them by the representatives of the several towns and the city of Kingston, and the State Tax Department, to ascertain whether the valuations in one tax district bear a just relation to the valuations of all the tax districts in the county; and they have determined that the ratios or percentages which the assessed value of the real property in each town and in the city of Kingston bear to the full value of such real property, are as follows:

Ashokan Dam Engineer Dies

Salt Lake City, Dec 1 (AP).—Arthur Frederick MacArthur, prominent engineer and member of the MacArthur Brothers Company of New York, died here last night at a local hospital. MacArthur arrived here a month ago to visit his sister, Mrs. William Storey, Jr. Acute colitis was given as the cause of death.

MacArthur had achieved international fame as an engineer and supervised construction of more than 8,000 miles of railroads in the United States as well as abroad. He also had charge of the construction of many large dams and reservoirs, including the Ashokan dam, and many miles of tunnel acqueduct for the board of water supply of the city of New York.

Mr. MacArthur frequently visited Ulster county during the construction of the Ashokan dam and Catskill aqueduct. He was a member of the the firm of MacArthur Brothers & Co., who were associated with Winston & Company in the dam construction, the contract having been awarded to Winston & Company and MacArthur Brothers & Company. Both firms were engaged in other big contract work at the time the Ashokan dam was under construction.

In all of the contract work in which the two firms were employed, Arthur Frederick MacArthur was especially engaged in the engineering problems. His brother, John R. MacArthur, was engaged principally in financing the enterprises and James O. Winston of Saugerties was in charge of the actual construction work.

Ontario Ballots In "Wet" Election

Toronto, Dec. 1 (AP).—The people of Ontario are balloting today to choose representatives for the 17th legislature of the province, but with the main issue wet and dry.

Old party lines have been cast to the winds during the campaign. G. Howard Ferguson, the Conservative Premier, is asking to be returned to power on a platform that all sales of liquor shall be under government supervision, and that sales of doctors' prescriptions shall be done away with. The Premier has argued during the campaign that his proposed system would kill off the trade of the bootleggers and thus be more of a temperance measure than the present act permitting sales on prescriptions.

The Liberal Party, the Progressives and the Prohibitionists, on the other hand, hold that if Mr. Ferguson is victorious his measure will make liquor more readily obtainable and therefore constitute a blow to temperance. These groups are demanding a continuance of more strict enforcement of the Ontario Temperance Act, which was brought into force in 1916 as a war measure.

Cristy Is Dead Of Bullet Wound

Worcester, Mass., Dec. 1 (AP).—Austin Phelps Cristy, founder and for 35 years owner and editor of the Worcester Telegram, died early today at city hospital where he had been since Monday afternoon suffering from the effects of a self-inflicted bullet wound. He was 76 years old.

He shot himself in the left side in the brokerage office of J. S. Bache and Company, where he maintained a private office.

The motive for taking his life remained a secret, and many and varied were the conjectures on the reason for the deed. It has been said that poor health had preyed on his mind, while others thought money losses had played some part. Intimate friends and his bankers, however, believed that his losses, if any, had been slight.

Graduating from Dartmouth in 1873, Mr. Cristy practiced law in Springfield for a short time and then after two years as a clerk of central district court in Worcester he resigned to launch the Telegram.

He had long been considered one of the greatest influences in Worcester county politics during the 35 years he dictated the policies of the Telegram.

Harding's Letter Approving Lease Put Into Evidence

In Effort To Show Fall Did Not Bear Responsibility For Award of Elk Hills Lease To Doheny Interests—Approved Entire Program of Department.

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—A letter by President Harding approving the oil leasing policies of Albert B. Fall while he was secretary of the interior was brought into court today by the defense in the Fall-Doheny oil conspiracy trial.

The letter was sent to the senate in April, 1922, in reply to the original resolution of inquiry into the Teapot Dome and Elk Hills leases. It was put into evidence while a prosecution witness was on the stand, and was a part of a defense effort to show that Fall did not himself bear the responsibility for award of the Elk Hills lease to the Doheny interests after Doheny had advanced him a "loan" of $100,000.

In his reply to the senate, President Harding said he was acquainted in detail with the policies of the Interior Department, had been apprised of the exact terms of various leases, and approved and supported the entire program of the department.

E. C. Finney, assistant secretary of the interior, a government witness, testified he personally had submitted much of the Interior Department detail incorporated in the president's message.

Fall's Statement.

The president's letter did not go into detail regarding individual leases, but he enclosed a statement by Fall, then secretary of the interior, outlining what had been done and saying that he was certain the contracts entered into "will redound to the credit of your administration, both in the immediate present and the distant future."

Correspondence With Standard Oil.

Under cross-examination by Mark B. Thompson of counsel for Fall, Finney told the jury of correspondence with the Standard Oil Company of California regarding the Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, oil storage project, a contract for which eventually was awarded the Doheny interests.

Finney said the Standard Oil Company expressed misgivings as to the authority of the Interior Department to enter into a contract involving such extensive interests of the Navy Department and suggested that Secretary Denby of the Navy Department be made a party to the proposed contract.

The witness assured Secretary Fall, he said, that the Standard's ideas on that point were "All wrong," since President Harding's executive order of May 31, 1921, transferred all authority over naval reserves from the Navy to the Interior Department.

Finney said he received a petition from Doheny's Pan-American company on November 22, 1921, seeking relief from what it regarded as burdensome royalty terms in a contract covering twenty-two offset wells in the naval reserve.

Adjustment Through Additional Leases.

After discussion with Fall, Finney told the company the government could not reduce the terms, but would consider an equitable adjustment through additional leases to the company.

Owen J. Roberts of government counsel brought out that Fall was advanced the $100,000 by Doheny on November 30, 1921.

Dorris C. Ham, secretary in a Washington law firm, was the next government witness. She identified a letter in which Union Oil Company of California protested to the secretaries of the interior and navy that it had not been asked to bid on the Pearl Harbor project. The letter was dated April 28, 1922, three days after the Pearl Harbor contract had been awarded to Doheny's Pan-American company.

Little Boy Drowns In Donovan Pond

Playing With Companions When He Attempted to Rescue Ball—Three Year Old Brother Has Trouble in Giving Alarm.

Little Richard Warren Harding, 5 year old son of Brant E. and Edna Buck Harding, of 55 Washington avenue, was drowned in a small pond on the old Donovan tract near Marius street Tuesday afternoon.

Richard and his brother, 3 years old, were playing about the pond, which is near their home. With several other small children they had been playing ball when it is supposed the ball went into the pond and Richard attempted to recover it. Whether he slipped from the bank or entered the pond in an effort to get the ball and went beyond his depth is not known as all the children in the neighborhood were small. A man working in the vicinity was notified of the fact by Richard's three year old brother, but he was unable to understand the little lad. Thinking he had said the ball was in the pond, the man secured a rake and recovered the ball, not knowing that the lad was trying to tell him his brother was in the pond.

How long the little fellow was in the pond is not known, but about 4 o'clock one of the children went to the Harding home and gave the alarm. Mrs. Harding, who was at home, ran screaming from the house and led by the boy went to the pond where she plunged in and recovered the body of her son, who had drowned in about three feet of water. Neighbors alarmed by her screams went to the scene and taking the little lad from her arms they carried him to the home of Herman Schafer on Josephine avenue and a doctor was called. Dr. Frank A. Johnston responded and found the lad was dead.

The crew of the Kingston Gas and Electric Company was notified and responded with the pulmotor but after over an hour's work found their effort of no avail.

Mr. and Mrs. Harding with their family came to this city some time ago from Pennsylvania, Mr. Harding being engaged as an expert watchmaker by Safford & Scudder, Wall street jewelers.

The pond where the child was drowned is a favorite gathering grounds for the lads of the neighborhood who play in the vicinity.

The funeral will take place from the undertaking chapel of A. Carr & Son, No. 1 Pearl street, on Thursday at 4 p. m., with interment at Williamsport, Pennsylvania.

Wheeler Talks Of Dry Education

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, forecasts an educational campaign directed in part against any wet candidate for president in 1928, that will "sow the nation knee-deep in facts on the benefits of prohibition."

Speaking at a dinner given by the New York Economic Club here last night, Mr. Wheeler declared "state executives who aid in the repeal of state enforcement laws can never be trusted to enforce the Constitution of the United States in the White House," and his assertion was considered a reference to Governor Alfred E. Smith.

"The new dry campaign," said Mr. Wheeler, "will sow the nation knee deep with facts on the economic, moral and social benefits of prohibition, and public sentiment will be aroused until a reputable citizen will no more think of speaking of his bootlegger than he would of his horse thief."

Simpson's Motion For a Mistrial Is Denied by Court

Justice Parker Denies Motion for Mistrial in Hall-Mills Case Made by Prosecutor Simpson on Ground of Alleged Improprieties.

Court House, Somerville, N. J., Dec. 1 (AP)—Justice Charles W. Parker this afternoon denied a motion by the state for a mistrial in the Hall-Mills case.

The motion was based on affidavits submitted this morning in which allegations were made that members of the jury had slept in the court room during the hearing of testimony and has indicated prejudice against the state and its representatives in discussions outside the court.

Judge Parker made no comment beyond saying that he had studied the affidavits and that he had decided to deny the motion for a mistrial. Neither state nor defense counsel commented.

The jury, which had been taken from the court room, was brought back in and preparations were started for the defense's summation.

It was announced that former Attorney General Robert H. McCarter will speak first for the defense. He will occupy the entire afternoon session and will be followed by Clarence E. Case, tomorrow.

Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, will close for the state.

Justice Parker asked that the order of summation speeches be fixed, so that the trial could move forward promptly in the event the motion for a mistrial should be refused.

When the prosecutor arose to make his motion he asked that the jury be excluded, the suggestion meeting prompt objection from the defense counsel, Robert H. McCarter, insisting that if charges were to be made against the jury, the members should hear them.

Justice Parker overruled the defense contention and sent the jury from the room.

Simpson read a dozen affidavits from newspaper reporters, detectives and relatives of Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, slain with the Rev. Edward W. Hall, the affidavits accusing jurors of nodding, dozing or sleeping outright during the trial, of chatting with counsel for defense and others.

Housekeeper's Affidavit.

An affidavit was read from the housekeeper at the hotel where the jurors are lodging and the court's attention was directed to a letter written by Gilbert Van Dorne, proprietor of the hotel.

The housekeeper's affidavit said that some members of the jury had used the telephone and received callers.

In repeating charges made by Van Doren, Simpson said that a personal reference was made to him, Van Doren quoting one of the jurors as applying an epithet to him. After apologizing to the court the special prosecutor said that the epithet was an obscene and unprintable expression.

The letter, the state's lawyer said, indicated that some of the jurors had declined to believe the testimony of the state's star witness, Mrs. Jane Gibson.

After the morning session when the defense had completed its case, the jury was taken out and Simpson read an affidavit by Van Doren.

Affidavit by Hotel Proprietor.

It recited that from conversation made in Van Doren's presence to and with members of the jury, the affiant was convinced that the jury had formed an opinion before the state's evidence was presented.

As early as the second day of the trial, the affidavit stated, Juror John Young had said Simpson was a liar. The prosecutor read into the record from the affidavit the unprintable terms with which Van Doren alleged the juror had described Simpson.

Van Doren said he had argued with Young and with Longaneto, one of the constables assigned to guard the jury, both of whom, the affidavit alleges, had called Mrs. Gibson a liar and a name which Simpson read into the record.

The affidavit also alleged that Jurors Roach and Hope, with Young, had declared they would "show Hudson county that it could not come down here and run things."

Simpson is from Hudson county, the state stronghold of the Democratic party, and Jersey City fellow from the same county, carried on most of the investigation.

Says Jurors Bragged.

On the day Mrs. Gibson testified, Van Doren alleged one of the jurors was bragging about the good times they were having and the good meals they were receiving, and on being advised by Van Doren to wait until they were locked up for a verdict before boasting too much of good times, replied "Oh, hell, we won't be out twenty minutes."

After the reading of the affidavit, Justice Parker suggested that pending decision on the motion for a mistrial, counsel on both sides should indicate how much time would be required for summing up.

McCarter said both he and Case would speak for the defense and that he thought he could finish this afternoon. Case said he would try to finish his address in two hours.

Supreme Court Convenes Monday

Judge Russell to Preside at December Term—Calendar Contains 387 Cases—Two Causes Are Preferred.

The December term of the Supreme court will be convened at the court house Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock with the Hon. Pierce R. Russell presiding. This is the first appearance of Judge Russell in Ulster county since his election to the Supreme court bench last year.

There will be a grand and trial jury in attendance.

The calendar is made up of 387 cases of which two are preferred causes, one a penalty action brought by The People of the State of New York against Fred D. Cure, and the second a negligence action brought by Mrs. Laura Herring, as administrator, etc., of the estate of John Herring, against Besher Fadoul and others. The action grows out of the death of Mr. Herring, who was fatally injured when a car parked on East Strand was caused to back when Mrs. Fadoul entered it. The car which she claims she had entered to sit and wait in suddenly backed up and struck another car in the rear of it, injuring Mr. Herring, who was unloading his produce truck at the curb. He suffered a severe fracture of the leg and died at the Kingston City Hospital later. Mr. Herring resided and conducted a farm at Union Center. Chris J. Flanagan is attorney of record for plaintiff and Earl S. Jones for defendants.

The calendar of causes will be called Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Deputy County Clerk Walter G. Geroldsek for the purpose of marking causes as provided under the rule of the court.

Hill Plans to Attack Dry Law

Washington, Dec. 1 (AP)—Shortly after the bang of the speaker's gavel sets the house of representatives vibrating formally for business Monday, Representative John Phillip Hill of Maryland, chairman of the unofficial committee on modification of the Volstead Act, plans to begin marshalling his forces for a new offensive against the dry law.

Upon his return to the capitol, he announced that a sub-committee of the unofficial group had been at work during the summer recess drafting a bill, which when introduced is expected to carry an endorsement of every wet member in congress.

Hill said the first thing for the committee to do would be to determine whether to introduce the proposed bill at the approaching session or hold it over until the convening of the new congress in which he contends, the wet block will have a materially increased membership as a result of the November elections.

"Once the bill is introduced," he asserted, "it will be pressed by every parliamentary means until brought to the floor of the house where a record vote may be obtained."

Court Admits Turner to Bail

Gilbert A. Turner, the elder of the two cousins arrested at the town of Marlborough and held by Judge Hutchins to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of unlawful entry and taking Gladys Williams from her home and abandoning her on the public highway at night, was admitted to bail Tuesday. Bail was fixed at $500 and supplied. Earl Houghtaling of Walden appeared for Turner. The Williams girl, who is but fifteen years old, was brought to the court house Tuesday afternoon by the sheriff and turned over to the custody of Miss Doremus, county agent, and will probably be placed in some institution where she can be cared for and given proper surroundings.

The girl has been before the authorities before when she made a serious charge against her father. The girl's home life and surroundings have been far from good and an effort will be made to have her cared for in some proper institution.

Trolley Road Agrees to Bus Route Change

Willing to Run Busses Over East Chester Street Provided Stephan Street Is Made Passable—City Will Wait Until Spring to Repair Street.

Several weeks ago residents of East Chester street and vicinity petitioned the common council to have the trolley company run its busses over East Chester street and through Stephan street. The petition was referred to the bus committee which met with General Manager G. Burton TeBow of the trolley road Saturday afternoon when a trip over the proposed route was made.

Tuesday evening at the regular monthly meeting of the board of public works Alderman Moore of the Third ward appeared before the board and stated that the trolley company was willing to run its busses over the proposed route, provided Stephan street was placed in a passable condition. He said that the bus committee had made the trip over the route in a bus Saturday afternoon and had completed the run in four minutes without stopping to take on or discharge passengers.

If the proposed route was adopted it would eliminate the busses running through Hasbrouck avenue from East Chester street to Prince street, but would afford transportation facilities to those who now reside half a mile away from the bus line.

Alderman Moore said that Mr. TeBow was willing to run busses over the proposed route provided the board would place Stephan street in passable condition.

The board, after much discussion, decided it was too late in the season to do any street work, but adopted a motion to repair Stephan street in the spring.

Parking Places On State Roads

Finger Lakes Association Suggests Need of Turn-outs Where Motorists May Stop for Lunch—Property Owners Object to Trespassers.

Auburn, N. Y., Dec 1 (AP).—There was a time when motorists desired only a place to travel. Now, apparently, they are in need of a place to stop. Highways have become so congested that parking places, outside of the stream of traffic, are in demand.

New difficulties in touring have arisen because on the one hand motorists want to keep traffic moving and on the other property owners wish to prevent trespassing. The state has provided the highways, the motorist has acquired his vehicle; there are plenty of places to go but the vital question is where to stop.

The advisability of providing along the improved highways frequent turn-outs, for tourists who wish to tarry has been suggested to the state department of public works and the state parks council in resolutions recently adopted by the Finger Lakes Association.

The association, a civic organization representing 35 cities and villages of Central New York, seeking to enhance the pleasure and safety of motoring on roads throughout the state, also has suggested that "the state of New York and the several counties therein provide and acquire along the improved highways of the state, suitable and adequate approaches, right-of-way, picnic grounds, parks or other recreation grounds adjacent to lakes, rivers and waterways for the use of the general public and the people of the state."

The association explained that many miles of improved highways have been or will be constructed along or near lakes and rivers and that the shore lines of these waterways are fast becoming developed and occupied with cottages and other construction. The owners and occupants of such cottages, it was pointed out, are increasingly asserting their private property rights against trespassing by the travelling public.

"The people of the state have a right to enjoy the lakes, rivers and waterways and are entitled to have provided for them suitable approaches and access thereto without question and without infringement on the private rights of others," the association said.

With respect to the proposed turn-outs, the association declared that travel is increasing at a rate that makes the highways at certain places and certain times "alarmingly congested." It is further pointed out that there are numerous places on the roads which afford vistas of great beauty at which the public desires to pause.

"In the construction of our highways," it was said, "many corners are eliminated, leaving a triangular space between the old and the new right-of-way, that is wasted and remains unsightly. Such waste land might well be used for a plaza where motorists might tarry for lunch in their cars, outside the line of traffic.

KINGSTON, N. Y., DEC. 1, 1926.

Evidently Dr. Abbott, headmaster of the Lawrenceville, N. J., school for boys, entertains no illusions about the "good old times" He confidently asserts that the boys of today "are five times as decent, as truthful and as manly as the boys of my youth".

Even a dumb woman can manage to speak her mind when so disposed. James Handy, a deaf mute of Kansas City has been granted a divorce from his wife, who is also deaf and dumb, "because she nagged and cursed him in the language of the fingers".

The splendid physique of the Indians of Venezuela astonished a recent traveler, "considering that their main diet is a species of bananas, a substance they call bread, goat's milk cheese, and fish". Who knows? Maybe that diet is a large part of the explanation.

Anti-enemy "propaganda" was no new thing in 1914-1918, for "twenty-five years ago today" (or the other day) Lord Kitchener "denied the reports that the British soldiers in South Africa placed Boer women and children in front of themselves during the fighting at Graspan."

A California man asks for a divorce on the ground that for eight years his wife fed him on nothing more substantial than pickles, ice cream and chip beef. The San Francisco papers call it the "delicatessen divorce"—which is hardly fair to even the most ordinary delicatessen shop.

Lieut. Col. Thomas J Dickson, chaplain during the World War, says he has read fifty-two school histories and finds them all inaccurate, particularly in their treatment of that war. After ploughing through that many school histories some of us would be incapable of any opinion whatsoever on the subject.

In spite of time's changes the military tradition of the Old South still lingers. War Department figures show that the eleven States of the Southern Confederacy, with only 22 per cent of the white population of the United States, furnish 27 per cent of the officers in the army. Virginia leads with one officer for every 3,360 of its population, with South Carolina as a close second, while the average for the country as a whole is only one officer in every 7,000 of population.

DODGING A MANDATE.

In the short time since the result of the vote on the Volstead Law Referendum became known in this state the magnates of the Anti-Saloon League, the W. C. T. U., William H. Anderson's American Protestant Alliance, Miller's Reform League, the Prohibition Party, the Cristman organization and various other advocates of intemperance and oppression have put forth thousands of words explaining why the vote was not conclusive. All have laid stress on two points: The wickedness of the cities, whence came the majority for modification, and the alleged fact that "dry" voters refrained from voting at all.

While detailed official returns are not yet accessible, sufficient is known to utterly explode these claims. Had all the voters who went to the polls and refrained from voting on the Volstead Law Referendum voted against it, the Referendum would still have carried by a huge majority. Test ocotes the "strike" question.

Ulster county gave 5,627 majority for modification. The total vote in Ulster county for Governor was 30,401. The total vote on the Referendum was 24,184. The Cristman vote was 2,761. Presuming that the Cristman vote is the measure of the "strike" in Ulster county, and presuming that had those "strikers" voted they would have voted against the Referendum, we find that in that event the Referendum would still have carried the county by 2,866 majority.

As to the relative attendance of city and country, everyone who observes with the unaccustomed eye knows that the countryside dry boatmen being considered by them to be very wicked indeed, an analysis of the city and country vote in Ulster county is instructive. Of the 5,627 majority for the Referendum in the county, 3,351 was given in the city and 2,276 in the remainder of the county. Even had the 1,892 Cristman voters in the towns not "struck", but voted against the Referendum, there would still have been a majority for the Referendum in the county outside the city. So, according to the standards of Anderson and his followers, the country districts are almost as wicked as the city, their wickedness consisting in an admission that the Volstead Law is not to be considered as perfect, unchangeable and on a par with the Ten Commandments.

TREATING THE SICK BRAIN.

You hear from time to time about individuals who are perfectly sane being kept in institutions for the insane.

In England this matter was investigated and it was found that "instances of sane persons being wrongly detained must be of the rarest occurrence".

However, the whole system of treating mental cases in these institutions has been undergoing a change in the last few years

Formerly as you know when an individual became sick mentally the family, perhaps much against their inclinations, simply reported the condition to a physician, who, after examining the patient with another physician "certified" that he was mentally unsound, and he was then committed to the hospital for the insane

Here the "treatment" simply meant keeping him under observation all the time so that he did not injure himself or others. Once the brain had become sick, it was thought to be useless to do other than just keep the patient away from sane people.

This royal commission in London tells us that there is no clear distinction between mental illness and physical illness, and that the manner of handling the matter should be the same.

This means that there should be methods of prevention and treatment of brain ailments, just the same as other parts of the body.

Further, that instead of taking a patient forcibly against his will to one of these institutions, the matter should be laid before him in a straightforward way, and he should be shown that if he had an illness of lungs, heart, appendix, and so forth, he would go willingly to the hospital, so should therefore go willingly, voluntarily as it is called, to the hospital for mental ailments He simply signs the paper himself, instead of being "committed" by certificate of two physicians.

You can readily understand how the battle is half won, when an individual realises that his family, and his doctor, believe he is sick mentally, and are trying to get him back to health.

He does all he can to help himself.

You will admit that this all seems like good sense.

Conspirators in First Mutiny in United States Navy, Hanged December 1, 1842.

The heart of the American nation was wrung, in December, 1842, at the story of the mutiny and tragedy on board the United States brig "Somers," then under the command of Captain Alexander Slidell Mackenzie.

The chief ringleader in this amazing plot and crime was no less a person than Midshipman Philip Spencer, son of the distinguished statesman, Hon. John C Spencer, of Hudson, N. Y., Secretary of War under President Tyler, and officiating in that capacity at the very time of the tragedy This act stands out as the first regularly organized mutiny in the annals of the United States naval service

The scheme transpired on the voyage of the "Somers" to the United States from Liberia, from which place she sailed November 11.

On Saturday, November 26, Lieutenant Gansevoort informed Captain Mackenzie that a conspiracy existed to capture the brig, murder the commander, officers, and most of the crew, and convert her into a pirate, with Midshipman Spencer in command.

The plot is supposed to have been detected when Spencer unfolded his scheme to one Wales, the ship's steward, who was offered a chance to assist in the mutiny, but who not only refused but told of the plot to Purser Hieskell, who was Lieutenant Gansevoort's informant.

When this monstrous and improbable project was related to Captain Mackenzie he was inclined to treat it with ridicule, promising that Spencer, who delighted to read piratical stories, had amused himself with working upon Wales's credulity.

Considering it his duty, however to be on his guard, lest there should be even a shadow of reality in the scheme, Mackenzie directed Gansevoort to watch Spencer

Later in that day Gansevoort detected Spencer examining a chart of the West Indies, and he had sought some information regarding the Isle of Pines He was also seen in secret conference with F. Cromwell, boatswain's mate, and Elisha Small, seaman, and to both of them he had given money. Spencer had also distributed money and tobacco to members of the crew, in defiance of orders The steward stole brandy which Spencer and several of the crew drank, and on several occasions he was disrespectful to his captain.

These and various other circumstances determined Captain Mackenzie to question Spencer. In the interview Spencer confessed to several questionable actions but asserted they were only done to play a joke on Wales

Captain Mackenzie ordered Lieutenant Gansevoort to arrest Spencer, and put him in double irons. He was also directed to keep a close watch on the prisoner and to put him instantly to death if detected in speaking to any of the crew.

In Spencer's locker was found a razor-case in which was a well conceived plan of the mutiny written in Greek, which also contained the names of those concerned in the plot.

Cromwell and Small were detected in secret conversation with Spencer and immediately ironed. Then Mackenzie addressed the crew, explaining the general nature of Spencer's project. The effect was various. It filled many with horror, inspired others with terror, but the whole crew was far from tranquil.

Those most seriously implicated began to collect in knots during the night, and in this alarming state of disaffection the captain ordered a thorough inspection of the crew and the arrest of those principally suspected.

The officers held a council, which continued without interruption or food, throughout the entire day, and the unanimous result of their deliberations was that Spencer, Cromwell and Small should be put to death.

On December 1, 1842, the three conspirators were hanged in the presence of the crew, each confessing his part in the proposed mutiny.

The tragedy was investigated by a court of inquiry, and Captain Mackenzie's course was fully approved. A court martial, lasting forty days, also resulted in his acquittal.

Kentish Hop Crop

Not all the hops grown in the fields of Kent go to the British brewers, for it is said that the dyers take most of the hops grown in old England. The harvesting of the crop is uncertain business, for picking cannot begin until the hops are ripe and they soon spoil. The pole must go to the cutter, or dying kilns, as soon as they are picked, and if the pickers are too energetic there is waste.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

ADVENTURES

For years Earle had been playing Indian. When he was quite, quite young he had been given an Indian suit which had started him off on his adventures.

He had had adventures, too.

It was really remarkable but so often when he had put on that suit the adventures just seemed to come rushing in at him, bidding him leave whatever he was doing for there were excitements to be had.

And Earle had had excitements.

There had been the time when there was the fire in the woodshed and he had discovered it and had had to think quickly in order to save the whole house from catching fire.

If he had taken the time to rush up the street to let people know there was a fire or to get the fire department, the woodshed fire would have been well under way and the wooden house would have never been saved.

Earle had been alone in the house, and he had put the fire out by himself, put it out enough, at least, so that it was safe to put in an alarm and to summon others to make sure that it did not spread and that it was not smoldering.

He had been praised for that, and he had deserved praise.

But he remembered that dreadful, long, long moment when he had first discovered the fire and when he had wondered what he should do.

How dreadful it would have been if he had lost his head in the excitement and had done the wrong thing!

No one knew how hard it had been to decide then and there in a twinkling as he had decided.

How thankful he was that he had decided correctly.

Well, he had been wearing his Indian suit then and he had somehow felt that that had helped to think quickly.

He Had Been Wearing His Indian Suit.

He had thrown aside his feathered head-gear and had set to work with dippers of water.

There had been many adventures that had turned up when he had worn it but none more wonderful, in prospect at any rate, than that which now was being considered.

"We thought," his family said, "that we might take a trip and that we might settle down for a few months in one of those small settlements where we could have plenty of out-of-door life and rest."

His father and mother had never had a real holiday and now was their chance.

Earle looked up all he could about the place where they decided to go.

In the first place it was off the beaten track and they only had a train there twice a week, and there were two Indian reservations right near at hand.

There were springs with gushing hot water that the Indians had discovered and there were deep, mountainous woods and ravines, and there were markings on great red rocks of happenings in the lives of Indians of long, long ago.

Oh, and such things as had happened! Such discoveries, such wild animal life, such freedom from everything usual. He heard of a horse-thief who had been caught in one of those mighty canyons and that they had named it Horsethief Canyon after the man.

He had heard that the horse was still there—owned by some gentle and respectable master.

Earle wondered if he would ever be allowed to ride that horse.

Think what it would mean to ride the horse of a famous horsethief who had hidden in canyons and lived on the food and water that the mountains and woods could give.

The more Earle thought of the trip the more thrilled and thrilled he became.

The more he read what he could about that section of the country the more interesting it seemed, and the more pictures he saw the more impatient he became to leave.

The trip was now a great, true promise.

COMMON SALT

Salt will make whitewash stick.

Salt on fresh ink stains will help in removing the marks.

Salt will revive a poor fire if thrown directly on the coals.

Salt thrown on soot will prevent it from making a stain on the rug or carpet.

Salt and water solution is an excellent gargle and inhaler for colds in the head.

Salt thrown on the carpet before sweeping will brighten the colors immensely.

HINTS FOR GARDENERS

The best garden plots are made by caterpillars and bugs.

Spraying insects with sarcasm and profanity does no good.

The plant that grows like a weed usually turns out to be one.

Remember that even if the whole country's vegetable crop is a failure, you can always raise prices.

Always sternly forbid your young son to work in the garden. He wouldn't do it anyway, and you get the credit for being obeyed.

Vegetables planted in the full of the moon usually die before they come up. Vegetables planted in the dark of the moon, however, usually die before they come up.

Don't spend a lot of time worrying about what to plant. Most birds will eat all sorts of seeds, and even if any vegetables should come up, you'll find the insects are not overly particular either.

Finally, don't be discouraged at the end of your yearly gardening experience. "Patronize your naborhood grocer."—Life.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

No man ever traveled over the road to fame on a pass.

It must be hard on the fingers of mutes to crack jokes.

You can lead a woman to talk, but you cannot make her think.

If a man is easily bought it is difficult to make him stay bought.

A baby cries itself asleep and everybody else awake simultaneously.

When the proverbial rainy day comes lots of men use borrowed umbrellas.

Some men are as proud of what they do as others are of what they can avoid doing.

Lightning very seldom strikes twice in the same place—probably because the place isn't there any more.

Some men boast that they can't be fooled twice in the same way, but there are lots of other ways.

HAPPY THOUGHTS

The most deplorable thing about the modern young woman is the modern young man.

Patience is considered a virtue when often it is merely a case of not knowing what to do.

It often happens that a duty is not half so disagreeable as the manner in which it is performed.

What a help words of encouragement would have been to many had they not been spoken too late.

There's one important thing the man who knows everything doesn't know, and that's how unpopular he is.

SCHOOL DAYS

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

THE POOR MILLIONAIRE

A MAN with many millions died the other day.

He v s far from his native country, far from the real sources of his wealth, and with all his riches far from being happy.

This is what he said before he died:

"My life was never destined to be quite happy. It was laid along lines I could not foresee. It left nothing to hope for, with nothing to seek or strive for. Inherited wealth is a great handicap to happiness. It is certain death to ambition."

If you read Plutarch's writings, and everybody should read them, you would be interested in his story of Alexander the Great, who was the son of Philip of Macedon.

When Alexander was a boy he was told of the great success his father was having in a war, of which he fought many. "My father will leave me nothing to do," was his comment. But when he arrived at age and began his own undertakings he so far outstripped his father's accomplishments as to entirely overshadow him.

That possibility rests in the hands of every young man who inherits great wealth But the great majority of rich men' sons are not Alexanders. They are w ng to spend, but not to earn. To distribute, but not to collect. To tear down, but not to build up.

But the son of the poor father has no other thing to do, if he does anything, but to build, to create, to construct.

It is a great advantage to the poor boy to have an outlet for his ambition.

It is a splendid thing that he has open fields for the exercise of his imagination. It is greatly to his benefit that he has to struggle to get on.

Muscles that you do not exercise wither and become useless.

An imagination that isn't working dies of inactivity.

The poor boy can imagine a thousand things that the rich boy will never think about. His view is not obscured by blinding wealth.

The poor boy can work, and work is the greatest blessing in this life. No man intent on his work, interested in the results, is ever long unhappy.

If you have health, ambition and persistence you have all that is necessary to the greatest success that was ever attained. Never mind about the money. That will come in due time.

THE YOUNG LADY ACROSS THE WAY

"THERE are no secrets between my wife and me," boasted the House Detective.

"That's tough, Kelly," answered the Hotel Stenographer. "That's mighty tough on somebody.

"Either you are not very nice people or you never have any fun in your lives. If you were both so slow that you never did anything before you were married that you did not want to tell, you certainly must have led a mighty bum existence. No kisses in the back of a taxi, no sly hug on a straw ride, no holding of hands in the 'movies,' must have been a mighty stale life.

"If you both did all the things which normal humans do and told each other all about it after you got married, you were a mighty poor pair of sports, and it was tough on the people with whom you did these things.

"When I get married, Kelly, I shall either keep my mouth shut to my man about what I did before I met him or else lie to him like a lady. It can't be any fun for a man who loves a woman to hear the details of the other man who kissed his wife before he came on the scene. So if he is fool enough to insist on her telling him, there is only one thing for her to do as a good and dutiful wife who wants to make her husband happy, and that is to do what you and your wife did, lie to each other.

"Even so, Kelly, it is hard for a woman to tell a man she never had a sweetheart till he came on the scene and let him get the idea that he alone kept her from being an old maid. The best way is to lie to him till some time when you get used to him and then tell him the truth just to take him down a peg like your wife will do to you some day."

Watermelon Is African

Zinc High in Favor

Zinc is the metal most generally used for roofing in Europe, to no great degree, in fact, that the metal artisans of those countries, it is said, would hardly know how to operate without such material.

The Lady Answered

He was an up-to-date, well-dressed collegian and this was his first day at the flying field. Near the Canuck, the small airplane, he noticed a crowd of men all gathered about what seemed to be the pilot. The crowd was singularly, overwhelmingly composed of members of the male sex. Our hero wondered at the deep interest shown by the men in a pilot of an airplane and he then casually strolled over to partake of the general curiosity. The center of all eyes, he at once noticed, was an aviatrix. With a superior swagger, he brushed through the crowd and asked the intrepid female, "aren't you often mistaken for a man?"

"No," she answered, "are you?"—New York Mail.

Good Use of Time

I build my fortune on the dial of my watch; seconds become pennies, minutes become dimes, hours become dollars; I give a money value to every tick and take advantage of everything that enables me to conserve time. I practice economy of time, I never procrastinate, thereby permitting others to get ahead of me. I am alert for opportunities; I look carefully into whatever seems good or inviting; when my judgment approves I act promptly, with decision. If there is a law of success, a rule by which one may obtain the desired and desirable rewards of life, assuredly one of its basic principles is making good use of our time.—Norma Smith, in Illinois Central Magazine.

LIVE BUSINESS MEN ADVERTISE IN THE FREEMAN

Girl Scouts Aid Hospital Drive

Last summer just as the Girl Scout troops were closing for the year, the Kingston City Hospital began their drive for funds. Mrs. George Halliday, county commissioner of the Ulster County Girl Scouts, pledged the sum of $200 toward the hospital fund for the Girl Scouts of Ulster county. She did this well knowing the calibre of the Ulster County Girls, as she had to make the pledge without consulting anyone.

A great many of the troops have been slow in organizing this year for one reason or another, but now they are all going again, and each troop had a certain quota given them to make up this pledge. The public can now be told of one of the many things the Girl Scouts are doing this winter.

Modena and Gardiner have been the first to send in the full amount of their quotas, and the other troops are following as fast as the money can be raised. While the Scouts have three years in which to raise this money they are bending every effort to pay it by June and there appears to be no doubt but that every cent will be in by that time.

One of the most popular Scouts has been in the Kingston City Hospital since last fall, and this fact has made the girls realize more than anything else the need of hospitals and the wonderful care that everyone receives in good ones.

MOTHERS CLAIM THEY CAN FIND TIME FOR POLITICS

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 1 (AP).—Motherhood and public service can go hand in hand without apparent detriment to either, a survey of women political leaders attending the convention of the New York State League of Women Voters here today showed.

Of some 200 delegates attending the sessions, a large proportion are mothers, some are grandmothers, but all declare they can find time for efforts in the political field without hindering their attention to their homes. The secret of the combination league leaders assert, lies in a careful allotment of one's time.

Among the women present at the convention the one with probably the largest number of children is Mrs Edward C. Carter of Briar Cliff Manor, N. Y., the mother of four. She is chariman of the International Cooperation Committee of the New York State League and when she went to Geneva to study the operations of the League of Nations, she took all four children along.

Gray Krimmer Is Perhaps First Choice in Trimming, but Cross Fox Scarfs and Novelty Reptilian Furs Add Interest to the Parisienne's Costume.

Paris.—Each season must bring its popular fur. Paris, always partial to mink, and kindly in her reception to novelty furs, has left no one in doubt this season as to her preference for cross fox for neck wear, and for gray krimmer as a trimming.

Two or three winters ago, one heard much in Paris of Persian lamb, but it was more talked about than accepted, although many of the haute couture trimmed coats or suits with it. This year there is hardly a collection that is barren of gray krimmer, and most of the better maisons make a point of featuring it. It is effective with the rich winey shades which seem to have gone to everyone's head, smart in the extreme on black, and very elegant with gray.

One now hears gray is a color gaining in importance, although excepting as a trimming it does not appear impressive these autumn days in which the sun penetrates the haze for a few hours at least, giving Paris still greater allure. Before I left America, it was conceded that gray fur was rather more distinguished than brown this season. Paris bears out this evidence. One finds other gray furs also, chinchilla and its countless imitations, squirrel, and such novel furs that one dares hazard no guess as to their origin, all trimming black or color, the most important of which is red.

There are good-looking costumes which depend largely on novel uses of sh[illegible] other reptile skins for inte[illegible]. There are also silks which are made in imitation of these speckled skins, and furs to no end. One of the most unusual crepes noted is mottled, or rather is in a sort of alligator pattern. This is used for the jumper of a costume, the skirt of which is plain self-toned crepe.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press.)

Paris—Paul Claudet, poet, who is to represent France at Washington, is reputed to have a better knowledge of the English language than any other man in the French diplomatic service.

Bridgeport, Conn.—If Mrs. Lottie Schoemmel wants to race Mrs. Clemington-Corson she must wear something besides grease. Mrs. Corson thinks her rival's distinctive costume is disgraceful, foolish and sundry other things.

Cleveland—Under some circumstances it seems to be a good thing for a young lady to tilt back in a chair and put her feet on a desk. Miss Frances Perkins, an official welfare worker of New York, delights in doing so. She says that it is beneficial for workers who stand a lot, in that it makes the blood rush the other way and some factories use the idea in rest periods.

New York—George Harvey wants congress forthwith to authorize envoys to Ireland, Canada and Australia, thereby "performing a gratifying duty in grasping the hands of these new nations."

Milwaukee—Lonely outside prison walls, Michael J. Harris is going to spend the rest of his life among his friends, the old timers inside. Paroled in 1916, he insisted upon returning "home."

New York—Private Bill Clanton, a Georgian, is the snappiest marine stationed in New York. He was picked from 200 to boss a guard of honor for Secretary Wilbur on a forthcoming visit.

Big Advance in Brick Industry

Hudson River Section Has Witnessed Greatest Advance In Brick Manufacturing In Its History—New Features In Manufacture and Shipment.

In the monthly digest of conditions in the common brick industry published today it is stated that more than three million dollars have been spent in improvements and additions to brick plants along the Hudson river during the past three years. While the Hudson river district perhaps offers the most conspicuous example of the extension in the brick business in this country, it is typical of what is going on in nearly all of the large construction centers.

Greater New York depends for its supply of building brick upon what the brick man in New York calls the "North River." Some sixty plants, mainly between Haverstraw and Mechanicsville, capable of producing a billion and a half brick a year, will during the year 1926 ship into the greater city approximately one billion brick.

A few years ago this district consisted almost exclusively of open yards where a large amount of labor was required and the drying of the brick depended upon atmospheric conditions. This situation is rapidly being changed by the use of artificial driers which make the plants independent of weather, and permit a longer season's production than was possible under the old methods. There also have been introduced the latest developments in automatic handling of the brick units.

Chicago, one of the largest brick producing centers, has led in the matter of plant efficiency. Practically all of the production of that city is handled with a minimum of manual labor by the use of automatic setters and loaders, and high-powered machines, producing as high as 300,000 brick from a single unit per day.

While these high-powered machines have not been adapted to the Hudson river clays, and perhaps never will be, yet the introduction of automatic machines in molding, conveying and in setting in the kilns, as well as in loading cars and barges from the kiln, has greatly speeded up production and increased capacity.

Another new feature of the Hudson river brick supply is the package shipping by rail, in which twelve boxes each containing three thousand brick are loaded upon specially equipped flat cars and delivered to unloading points in Manhattan. Several plants are now prepared to ship by rail, giving New York a supply of brick during the winter season when river navigation is closed.

At Mechanicsville, Kingston, Beacon, and other points there are plants with all buildings of fire-safe construction, using automatic machinery throughout, and prepared to ship either by rail or water.

The last year has seen the greatest advance in the brick manufacturing situation of the Hudson river that has ever taken place in that district.

MISS REDMOND PRESENTED WITH HANDSOME UMBRELLA.

Miss Marie F. Redmond, of the staff of the Kingston City Hospital, who recently resigned to accept a similar position with a large hospital in Atlanta, Georgia, left today for Atlanta. On Tuesday the Ladies' Auxiliary of the hospital presented her with a handsome umbrella as a slight token of respect. Miss Redmond was to have been entertained at tea by the Auxiliary last Friday, but owing to illness was unable to attend and the tea was not held.

PHOENICIA.

Mr. Tyler caught a wild cat in the mountain. It is alive and he has it in a cage. It is a young one and very pretty in its markings. It growls savagely when one looks at it.

All are glad Mrs. Charles Neice is somewhat better.

Mr and Mrs. H. Shepherd have moved in the G. Baldwin bungalow.

Mr. and Mrs. Tremper and family spent Thanksgiving with relatives in Arena. They returned Sunday afternoon.

The railroad company has been fixing the bad washout near the station. It took many ties to fill it in before the dirt dressing was added.

A five-passenger auto was found in the village of Phoenicia after the flood that visited this place recently and no one has put in a claim for it yet. Folks from the community are anxious to know the owner.

The Rev. Skidmore has been ill again.

Mrs. Wilson has moved to Kingston.

Mrs. J. L. McGrath will spend the winter in New York city.

Miss Harriet Lounsb got some very good pictures of the flood washouts near the station and pump house.

H. Sapolton is building a fine auto show-room. It will enlarge the garage and living rooms over the same.

G. Terry is putting a new roof on the residence of Conductor Baldwin. The new roof is of the cable type while the old one was flat.

Ottawa Strengthens Lead.

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—The Ottawa Senators, leading the National Hockey League, were still perched on the pinnacle today by reason of a 2-1 victory over the Boston Bruins last night. It was the fastest, cleanest game played this season. Only three minor penalties were inflicted, in the remainder of the night's four games the New York Rangers fought through a ten minute overtime period before beating the Chicago Black Sox, 4 to 3; the Detroit Cougars plastered the Maroons, 4-0, and the St. Patricks stunned Pittsburgh 6-0.

Army Training At Napanoch

Report On Napanoch Institution Describes Benefits From Military Drill Which Is Now An Established Practice.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 1 (AP).—Military drill is an established practice at the New York State Institution for Defective Delinquents at Napanoch.

The drill, inaugurated by the assistant superintendent, an ex-army officer, has become an important part of the training and has progressed to the point where the inmates, many of whom are morons, march in a "creditable dress parade" twice a week.

A report on the institution, approved today by the state commission of prisons, describes the benefits:

"The inmates march to the drill campus and to mess in company formation, and together with setting up exercises, which are engaged in every morning before breakfast, a soldierly bearing is manifest among them and the management feels it is most helpful to discipline and an aid in handling the men."

The report adds that a band has been organized, which is "said to be helpful in the military maneuvers."

When the drill is over, the inmates, numbering some 600 on the day of the inspection, turn to the reading of books and magazines from an "adequate library."

A large number prefer "western stories, picture magazines and books suitable for juveniles."

Recalling a recent break for liberty, in which four prisoners escaped the report passes along a recommendation of Superintendent Thayer that four additional guards and one guard-clerk be employed to augment the force of 69 now employed. Two of the four prisoners have been captured

Weather Bureau Is Not to Blame

Weather Forecasts Falsely Ascribed to Weather Bureau Which Does Not Make Long Distance Predictions—Penal Code Provides Punishment for Counterfeit Predictions.

Many people talk and write about the weather as if they had the authority of the Weather Bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture for what they say. Several recent occurrences illustrate the tendency on the part of a portion of the public to presuppose that any statement regarding weather must issue from that bureau. As a result, when an erroneous or doubtful forecast is made and circulated by some irresponsible person, many others accept it in good faith and act upon it in one way or another. Thus the public at large may unconsciously be misled to its own disadvantage.

For example, predictions of a cold winter specifically ascribed to the Weather Bureau have been used for advertising purposes in entire sincerity by some commercial concerns anxious to sell cold weather commodities—coal, or coats, or furs, or other things. The public is led to buy these articles because of the apparent authority of the statement. When actual conditions do not fulfill the prophecy they feel disappointed and inclined to distrust future statements issued by the Weather Bureau, even when they contain important warnings.

Apropos of this type of prediction, the Weather Bureau has steadily maintained that it can not at present attempt to make forecasts for months, seasons or years in advance, nor does it believe that this is feasible with data now available to meteorologists. It therefore confines its forecasts to those made daily or for a week in advance, also for aspects of the weather, such as cold or hot waves or other phenomena whose progress across the country can be anticipated with some degree of accuracy.

The attention of the public is furthermore called to an act of congress, approved May 3, 1905, and Section 61 of the Penal Code of 1909, the latter reading as follows:

"Any person who shall knowingly issue or publish any counterfeit weather forecasts or warnings of weather conditions, falsely representing such forecasts or warnings to have been issued or published by the Weather Bureau, or other branch of the government service, or shall molest or interfere with any weather or storm flag or weather map or bulletin displayed or issued by the United States Weather Bureau, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, for each offense, be fined in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars or be imprisoned not to exceed ninety days, or be both fined and imprisoned, in the discretion of the court."

Travel Far for Ochre

Natives of Australia frequently travel several hundred miles afoot to obtain red ochre, which they use solely as paint for their bodies. This substance is obtained from small caves in the big Wongoon mountains, Mullewa district of west Australia, says the Sydney Bulletin. Trips are made on foot rather than on horses because if members of other tribes learn that a native is carrying the highly prized ochre the messenger stands small chance of surviving his trip.

Many Attractions At Y. W. Fair

Folks who are looking for very nice and really unique Christmas gifts and cards will find them at the fair given by the Business Girls' Club at the Y. W. C. A. tonight. The fair opened Tuesday evening with a big attendance and a host of pretty things on sale, a short program, and lots of fun for all.

The booths are exceptionally pretty as to decorations and are filled with the sort of things that folks want to buy. In the Christmas House booth are to be found very unique Christmas cards that are reproductions from the old masters (in colors) of scenes appropriate to Christmas, and quantities of other cards. The fancy booth with its delicate pink and green decorations offers all sorts of seasonable and desirable articles of fancy needlework of all sorts. Then there is a "Wishing Well," to take the place of the usual fish pond, and a fortune-teller's booth where both card-telling fortunes and palmistry are to be had for the "bit of silver."

A very popular booth is the candy booth where home-made candy of various kinds is very appealing against a background of butterfly decorations. More butterflies decorate the handkerchief booth where one of the finest collections of dainty, unusual handkerchiefs to be found in the city is offered for sale. The Japanese booth, appropriately decorated, is an innovation this year that is very popular as offering gifts that are different. The cake booth is especially attractive with its delicious-looking home made cakes.

Besides all of these booths, there is a screamingly funny side show operated by The Live Y'ers, a booth where sweet cider and doughnuts are for sale and a lunch counter. Tuesday evening a bit of a program that was greatly appreciated was a recitation, "Si Pringle's Detective Experience," given by Maud Hopper, and a fancy costumed dance given by Priscilla Davis.

Tonight's program will include a musical presentation of "Old King Cole." Also there will be dancing following the program, and the Business Girls are looking for a big crowd.

Horses Guarded Master's Corpse

Team Remained Motionless for Twenty-four Hours Attached to Wood Load With Dead Body of Charles Mott Lying in Path.

A remarkable story of horse sagacity and fidelity was developed in connection with the discovery of the dead body of Charles Mott of Jefferson Heights, Catskill, Monday afternoon in the woods several hundred yards back of his home.

Sheriff Arbogast of Greene county was notified of Mr. Mott's disappearance and headed a searching party who found the body of Mott lying in a natural position in the wood road directly in front of his team of horses which he had driven into the woods hitched to a wagon to bring home a load of wood for fuel. He had apparently laid himself down from faintness or fallen dead without a struggle when preparing to load the horses and loaded wagon from the woods.

The horses could not move forward without passing over his body and they had stood motionless for twenty-four hours attached to the loaded wagon with their dead master lying directly in front of them. After the body had been moved and when it was attempted to start up the horses they were so weak and lame from standing so long without moving that one of the horses fell to its knees when it was urged forward, and both horses were so stiff that it was seen to be impossible for them to draw the wagon.

Mr. Mott is survived by his wife, a daughter and a son, and a brother and a sister. Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon with interment in the Jefferson Rural Cemetery.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—A sudden demand for the oil shares featured the resumption of the upward movement in today's stock market. Retention of relatively stiff call money rates was disregarded by speculators working for higher prices on the theory that the higher charge was only temporary.

The advance in the oils was led by Atlantic Refining, which was quickly bid up four points, and tended to confirm widespread rumors of a "December oil market." Phillips Petroleum and Mid-continent Oil preferred were bid up to new 1926 peak prices, the buying of the former being associated with merger reports.

Declaration of an extra dividend on Lehigh Valley common and the resumption of dividends on Colorado and Southern infused new strength in the rail shares, although some disappointment was caused by the failure of the Rock Island directors to declare a dividend on the common stock. Frisco preferred touched a new top price and Jersey Central was bid up three points.

Nearly a score of issues had made new peak prices before the end of the third hour, including several tobaccos and public utilities. Reynolds Tobacco B was an outstanding weak spot, yielding over three points.

DEVICES ON COINS HELD THEM SACRED

Greeks Used Religion to Deter Counterfeiting.

On one of the earlier coins of Greece there was stamped a tortoise. That was because a tortoise was a revered object. It was sacrilege to abuse or desecrate it any way. The state authorities, in putting a tortoise on money, had a good and sufficient guard against counterfeit, for the religious instincts of the people deterred them from attempting any such crime, says Farren Zerbe in "The Story of Money," issued by the Chase National bank.

The Greeks, because of their religious beliefs and practices, considered it sacrilege to put a human head upon coins, and so their early coins had the heads of gods of mythology. The death of Alexander the Great and his deification placed him among the gods. His portrait was admissible on coins. This was the first coin to bear a ruler's portrait. From his time on for many years the head of Alexander appeared on various Greek coins. It became the custom, following Alexander, to have the rulers of the ancient world deified during their lifetime.

Naturally enough, with the fall of Greece and Rome there was a decline in medallic art, and the coins of Europe for centuries were extreme crudities in comparison with the artistic excellence of those of earlier times. We have to go during the "Dark ages" to Parthia, Persia and Byzantium for specimens of medallic art. It is only as we come out of the Middle ages and enter the Renaissance that our metal coins in Europe indicate an attempt to revive art. The age of Elizabeth in England was an important one in the development of coins.

Queen Elizabeth has been referred to as the "mother of modern coinage." To her goes the credit for the common introduction of the use of the mill and screw in coining money. Earlier coins struck out without a collar assumed irregular shapes, and they would not stack properly. Elizabeth, adopting the idea from France, had coins struck within a collar and made them circular in shape, putting marks on the edge, so they would be uniform or identical in appearance. This device is now used in most modern states. Following Elizabeth we find that the practice spread to other countries, and there was a revival of competition in making artistic coins. In Italy today coins copy the quadriga of the Greek coins of 2,300 years ago. Our own dime is considered one of the most artistic coins of the present day.

Raisins in Palestine

The agricultural colonization department of the Palestine Zionist executive announces that it has been carrying out experiments in connection with the production of muscatel raisins in Palestine.

These experiments have been so successful—leading stores having declared the quality of these raisins to be equal to the California variety—that considerable areas are being planted with table grapes in order to produce a large yield for conversion into raisins next year, says the New Palestine. Orders for 400,000 vines have been received by the agricultural colonization department of the Zionist executive and additional orders have been placed with private individuals, states the report. At a competitive price these raisins realize a net profit of P. T. 2 per kilo.

Cultivation in Alaska

Alaska is anything but a desert. The government forest reservations alone embrace $20,580,000 acres—an area as great as that of the state of South Carolina. Most of this area is covered with dense virgin stands of spruce and hemlock.

There are 90,000 acres in Alaska in farms, and it is estimated that in the territory tributary to the government railroad there are 1,296,000 acres adaptable for farming. There are 65,000,000 acres of land suitable for grazing cattle, sheep or reindeer. That is a pasture more than twice the size of Ohio. In 1893 the reindeer herds, mostly owned by Eskimos, numbered 300,000 head.

Practical Patriotism

An amusing incident of the German occupation of Lille during the World war is related by a young American aviator, whose war diary is published in Liberty. The diarist had been to visit friends in the American army who were stationed at Armentieres. On his return, he recorded: "I heard a funny story down there. The Germans took Lille and the allies held Armentieres. For a long time the factories in Armentieres continued to be run on electricity that came from Lille. A Frenchman was kept to run the power plant by the Germans and he didn't cut Armentieres off. It was several months before he was caught."

Early "Trained Nurses"

It was early in the Twelfth century that a so-called "School for Nurses" was organized by the Abbess Hildegarde from among her friends and associates in hospitals. It was not until the middle of the Nineteenth century that the movement was given a distinct impetus, for which Florence Nightingale was responsible.

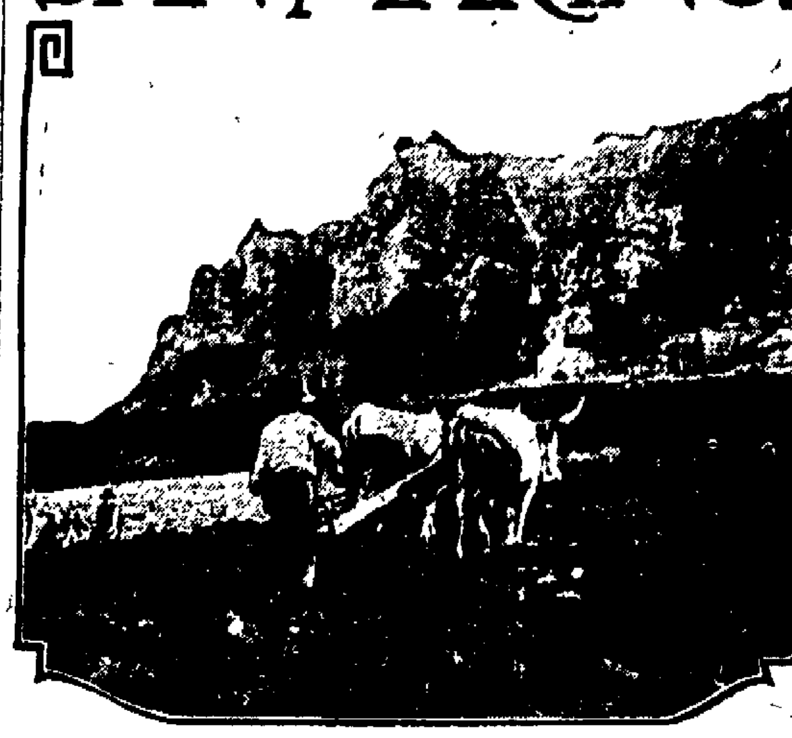
TINY SAN MARINO



Scene in San Marino.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

WITHOUT going out of Italy, Premier Mussolini recently went into a "foreign" country for a brief vacation. The answer to the seeming paradox is San Marino, one of the world's tiniest states, which exists nominally as a republic under Italy's wing.

San Marino lies about Mount Titanus with its capital on the height itself. It is 13 miles from the Italian city of Rimini, the republic's nearest railway connection.

The entire landscape to south and west is marked by mounts and peaks capped with medieval towers, bringing to mind those illustrated fairy tales of childhood, with their deeds of wickedness and chivalry. Legends and fairy tales indeed are interwoven in this marvelous panorama; but history, too,—history of violent and bloody warfare—rises phantomlike about those warning heights. They are the towers of the Malatesta, and from Rimini, past Verruchio, where these tyrants first established their lordship, to right and left of the river Marecchia, their story is written before San Marino.

But long before the Malatesta began their cruel sway, Mount Titanus had its place in the dawn of story, for it is no other than that famed mountain of mythology which the angry Titans raised in their efforts to reach Jove and drive him from his throne.

When one has left Rimini miles behind, the peaceful little state becomes an inspiring goal.

The frontier is crossed with scant formality. Serravalle, largest of the castelli, or towns, of the republic, first stop on San Marino soil, is passed, and the Borgo, nestling at the foot of the foreboding-looking mountain, shows quaintly narrow streets and arched loggias, as the courageous auto plunges determinedly up that precipitous drive.

The Piazza della Liberta.

At last it stops before an ancient gateway, where all passengers must descend. Then through its massive arch, up a steep, narrow street, the way leads with many turns, past little squares and market place, to the cherished spot of the Sammarinesi, the Pianello, Piazza della Liberta, with its statue of Liberty in the center. Here is the government palace, modern edifice of Fourteenth century architecture. Here are the postal and telegraph offices and the Tribunal. Doves, fitting symbols, flutter away to rest beneath the statue of San Marino, standing guard over his republic, from the palace angle. Before the wall, which seems to protect the promenaders from falling into the depths below, a view of unusual loveliness is unfolded.

But it is from the "Rocca," the ancient fortress, still higher, that a panorama of unsurpassed splendor is revealed—mountains and peaks, sea and plain, white ribbon-like winding through level and height toward distant parts. Ranges of mountains roll wavelike away into the horizon. Carpegna, cradle of the counts of Montefeltro, later dukes of Urbino, looms majestically. To the left a black streak against the horizon marks Ravenna's famed pineta, or pine forest.

But nearer at hand, so close that it seems as if one could almost call across, though it is six miles distant, the most compelling of all San Marino's mountainous neighbors holds the attention. It rises abruptly from the rolling hills, another seemingly inaccessible and impregnable rock, with a formidable fortress menacing the landscape from its precipitous height.

This is San Leo, whose history, interwoven in primitive times with that of San Marino, is of especial interest, in the light of the littlest republic's diverging line of development. War and tyranny ever disturbed the inhabitants of San Leo, while peace and liberty blessed San Marino. Tradition says the reason was that the body of San Leo was removed from the country, while that of San Marino remained—a powerful and venerated relic.

The position of San Marino, 13 miles from Rimini, is singular. This little republic, whose greatest length is 9 miles, is completely surrounded by Italy, who respects its autonomy, as have rulers of the past, with a few fleeting exceptions.

The tradition of its safety, its internal peace, in contrast to San Leo, is ingenuously expressed in the ancient belief that whenever an evil and avaricious spirit, covetous of dominion, entered a citizen, that citizen, through some occult power, was disposed of.

That this little republic, which today has 11,000 inhabitants and an area of 38 square miles, has maintained its independence, its ideal of liberty, in the midst of strife and bloodshed, of changing social conditions, for sixteen centuries, adds dignity to the unwavering belief of the trusting ones in the never-ceasing protection of the saintly founder.

The position of the mountain, far from the great Roman roads, the Via Flaminia and Via Emilia; sufficiently distant from the coast to be safe from maritime invasion; the stronghold impregnable to assault by medieval armies; the retiring and unostentatious, peace-seeking character of the inhabitants; the comparative poverty of the country—all contributed to San Marino's being left alone. But external reasons were not sufficient—there was an internal cause which existed in its institutions and its morality.

In the most disrupting centuries of Italian history San Marino had no factions, no strife between feudal lords and people, no domineering insolence of conquerors, no lost rights to vindicate. Instead, the people lived simply, changing their constitutions slowly, according to the needs of the times, always adopting changes which were best for the development and conservation of liberty.

In the life of the republic today the influence of the Dalmatian saint is strongly reflected. For a country to maintain the characteristics of its primitive founder is a social phenomenon of which possibly San Marino alone can boast.

How It Was Founded.

During the days of Christian persecution, in the middle of the Fourth century, Marino and Leo, the two stone-cutters of Arbe, Dalmatia, crossed the Adriatic and came to Rimini. Their reason, says tradition, was to aid Christians, condemned by pagan rulers, to reconstruct the walls of that city.

The walls of Rimini having been finished, Leo and Marino looked longingly upon the solitude of the two mountains. As the hermits of the Thebaid, who flourished at this same period, they sought peace and solitude in those impenetrable heights. Hewing a bed from the rock and cultivating a little garden, Marino found all his material wants supplied. This rough bed and site of the garden are pointed out by reverent peasants.

A few slaves followed their former overseers in order to practice, undisturbed, their Christian faith. Leo and Marino, overthrowing all pagan idols, each built a little church. Fine remains of the Roman temple of Jove, once dominating the height of San Leo, are seen in the columns of the cathedral and La Pieve today, while small bits of sculpture also have been found at San Marino, where the cathedral now rises on the ancient site of the Fourth century chapel of the saintly founder. From neighboring fields and pastures and little settlements, came the weary and oppressed, seeking peace and the Christian faith upon the two mounts.

The fame of the saintly hermit of Mt. Titanus spread abroad. Felicissima, a wealthy Roman matron of Rimini, impressed by the pious man, who had been bidden to come to that city, and grateful for receiving the light of Christianity and for the salvation of her sons, gave him the mountain, which she owned, as absolute and perpetual property.

The influence of San Leo has been wiped out by the centuries, while that of San Marino exists today, with a significantly simple appeal in these times that have so recently seen a bloody war.

Weighing Electricity

Electricity can be weighed as if it were tea or sugar, according to a British scientist. He has estimated that a small electric light bulb consumes just about an ounce of electricity in a year.

A little toil, and a little rest,
And a little more earned than spent,
Is sure to bring to an honest breast
A blessing of glad content.
And so, though skies may frown or smile,
Be diligent day by day;
Rewards will greet you after awhile,
If you just keep working away.

WHAT TO EAT

There are few people who feel that a meal is satisfying which is not finished with some kind of dessert.

Junket is a most delicious dessert for a hot day; it may be varied by the use of fruit pulp and whipped cream as a garnish. Add a tablet of junket to a quart of lukewarm milk, add sugar to sweeten and stir until the tablet is well dissolved. Crush the tablet and let stand in a tablespoonful of water to dissolve before adding to the milk. Let the mixture stand in sherbet cups in a warm room until the junket is set. Mash bananas and cover each sherbet glass with the pulp and top with whipped cream when ready to serve. Peaches or other fruit may be used.

Peach Sherbet.—Put a pound of sugar and a quart of water on to boil for twenty minutes. Let cool, then add one and one-half cupfuls of peach pulp, the strained juice of an orange and the juice of half a lemon. Freeze.

Mint Sherbet.—Soak half a cupful of chopped mint leaves in the juice of two lemons half an hour. Boil two cupfuls of sugar and a cupful of water five minutes, then pour over the other ingredients. When cold strain into a freezer, add the grated rind of the fruit and a well-beaten egg white, with a cupful of stiffly beaten cream. Serve with lamb roast or as a dessert.

Date Crackers.—Put a pound of washed and pitted dates with a cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of water into a saucepan and cook until smooth. Cool. Cream a cupful of shortening, add a cupful of brown sugar, two and one-half cupfuls of rolled oats which have been parched to a light brown, and two cupfuls of flour; stir until well-blended, add a teaspoonful of soda in half a cupful of hot water and stir into the mixture. Roll out, cut and place a spoonful of fruit on a cooky, cover with another, then bake.

Industrial Board Meet at Rochester

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 1 (AP).—The Industrial Survey Commission of the legislature will open its upstate inquiry in Rochester tomorrow. Hearings in New York have been concluded

With the purpose of suggesting remedial legislation, the commission will investigate conditions surrounding the relationship of employer and employe as reflected in the labor code of the state. New bills as well as amendments to existing laws may be necessary if the need is indicated by information developed at the hearings.

In Rochester the commission will collect facts and opinions in the Workmen's Compensation Act and on the advisability of enacting a 48-hour-a-week law for women in industry. The commission will also receive information on the Rochester building trades.

After the Rochester hearings are concluded, the commission will meet in Albany and other upstate cities.

Although the magnitude of the task before it apparently precludes a comprehensive report to the 1927 legislature, the commission will offer a preliminary report covering the main points brought out at the hearings. Recommendations will also be made for legislation

Thoughtful in Suicide

In order to cause as little trouble as possible to the authorities and to their respective families Gustav Braunn, age forty-five, and Anna Lazar, age eighteen, chose Braunn's family vault as the ideal place to commit suicide when they tired of life in Arad, Rumania. Braunn was one of the town's richest merchants. Anna was his secretary. They became infatuated, and, when local gossip began to make life unpleasant, they decided to die together. Some years ago Braunn had prepared a vault in the local cemetery for his family. To this vault they went in the dead of night, locked themselves in and killed themselves with revolvers.

Argentina's Winters

Apartment-house life is gaining rapidly in popularity among the Argentines, comments the Boston Post. One of the chief attractions is the central heating system, almost unknown in Buenos Aires a few years ago. Argentines say the winters have become increasingly severe in recent years and that this explains why so many detached houses, without any heating facilities, are being deserted for steam-heated apartments. One newspaper has begun a campaign in favor of heating the railway stations, street cars, subways and schools, pointing out that "every year is becoming colder, to the great discomfort of the public."

Chameleon Unhurt by Cold

A chameleon lived and thrived for three months in a wild state in a Rutland (Va.) garden. Early in the summer Ralph A. Barton bought the lizard as a plaything for some children. Tethered by a thread, it soon escaped and was seen no more for three months, when one of the children found it about fifteen feet from the spot where it last was observed. The creature of warm climes was lively in spite of the fact that it had been out of doors on several nights when the temperature neared the freezing point.

Commerce on Mississippi

The secretary of war says that statistics show that the commerce of the Mississippi river between St. Louis and New Orleans is now greater than it ever was before. The first official census of transportation by water in the United States was made in 1909, and this gave the total commerce of the Mississippi river and its tributaries as 20,239,303 tons. The total is now approximately 30,000,000 tons, without duplication, or nearly twice what it was 17 years ago.

A woman is a person who can run after a man and make him think he's running after her.

"What color bathing suit was Estelle wearing?"

"I couldn't see. She was reading a book."

A farmer walked into the general store and said to the recently bereaved widow, "I'll take that tub of oleomargarine and all the flour and bacon."

"My goodness, why do you want all those things?"

"Well, I'm executor of your husband's will and Lawyer Stiles told me to carry out all provisions."

Standards.

Parlors, and rooms where people sit up straight
On walnut settles that refuse to give,
Dim halls where visitors are asked to wait;
Boudoirs all pink and white, indicative
Of some shopkeeper's higher sense of art
Fit only for the stagiest negligee—
These places have no secrets to impart,
Being no more than settings for a play.
But let me see these houses from the rear,
The bird bath and the once ailanthus tree,
Clothesline and bottles and the dog on guard—
Then I can whisper something in your ear!
The world may keep on calling; as for me,
I'd rather judge a man by his back yard.

A Pennsylvania man who ate sauerkraut at least once a day, lived 104 years. Still, that's quite a price to pay for longevity.

The bride had but recently returned from her honeymoon and her mother was paying her first call on her since the wedding.

"Well, daughter," said she, "is George good to you?"

"Just darling, mother," replied the young wife. "Only yesterday he showed me how to open a can of condensed milk with a nail and hammer."

They called her "Peaches," because she was always getting canned.

The son wrote home for money till
It peeved his dad, and then
The father sent a postal card
Which said, "Enclosed find ten."

EVEN AS YOU AND I—A fool there was and he saved his rocks, even as you and I; but he took them out of the old strong box when a salesman called with some wildcat stocks, and the fool was stripped down to his socks, even as you and I.

Salesman—"Ever hear the joke about the antique dealer who had two skulls of Columbus—one when he was a boy and the other when he was a man"

Grocer—"No, what was it?"

A man says his motto is to keep his head cool, his feet warm, his mouth shut and his eyes on the grass widows.

He: Her niece is rather good looking.

Him: Don't say knees is, say knees are.

Manager of chinaware department, to new assistant: "One thing I insist on. If you break any dishes, come and tell me at once."

Assistant: "But I can't be runnin' to you every minute of the day!"

Crabs as Prospectors

Agile enough to climb coconut trees, the land crabs infesting the little island of Utila, off the coast of Honduras, were formerly looked upon as a nuisance. But recently the nineteen-year-old son of one of the inhabitants made a remarkable discovery by their aid.

Near one of the crabs' holes, which they burrow in the ground like rabbits, he noticed some black, strong-smelling mud excavated by the crabs. Experts examined this substance and pronounced it to be high-grade petroleum. It had long been suspected that oil existed on the island, but this was the first "strike."
